Australia - Money making scam against the meat industry

22 Jul 2012

I recall taking my mother to the ABC studios in Sydney in 1987 to meet Mike Walsh and Russ Hinze, who was the Minister of Everything in Queensland in those days.

When Mike asked Russ about diverting an arterial road to get closer to a hotel he had acquired, Russ replied "If that was true I would have diverted the road right through the bottle shop"

At least with Sir Joe and Russ you knew where you stood and despite their faults they were both hard working "Aussie Battlers" who came from nothing and made many mistakes along the way.

This was the time of the "White Shoe Brigade" who pounced around the Gold Coast calling themselves property developers.

Louis Toumbas is now emulating the white shoe brigade in his money making scam against the meat industry. "Fat Louis" has set up a web site asking for donations to close down a leading Queensland meat works that employs hundreds of Australian families.

Fat Louis Toumbas Damaging Australian farmers.

It's a FAKE!

How the scam works is by fearmongering and cashing in on peoples ignorance over meat inspection procedures, along with false allegations about disease from livestock, despite the fact that "Fat Louis" grandparents had goats and chickens living in the house in their native Greece.

Members of the public are then asked to send donations to a trust fund on "Fat Louis" behalf.

Complete with dark glasses even on the coldest winter day, what Toumbas fails to tell the unsuspecting public is the fact he has bought land close to the meat works and the closure of the abattoir would triple his investment in value.

Toumbas like may old rogues is an active member of the church and promotes himself as a charity worker and we all know charity begins at home with these types.

We have enough real problems in the meat industry, without this type of fearmongering and scandal, that will only hurt more Australian farmers who are already doing it tough.

Donations

Petition Online - Australia is an independent site. Please help support it with a donation through one of the methods described on this page.

Petition Online - Australia does not accept direct sponsorship of any campaign, nor does it sell the names or emails of those who sign the petitions. It is and will always remain free.

We don't want to subject ourselves to the dictates of the free market: ideals are priceless and cannot be bought or sold.

For this reason we ask for your help.

Many campaigns started here at Petition Online - Australia have become victorious and have changed the lives of small communities or even entire countries. There is nothing like the grassroots awareness that the Internet can achieve, touching consciences and moving people to action.

Send us your contribution today and join us in continuing to offer people around the world the possibility, the tools and the information necessary to create change within their communities.

It is only through voluntary support from contributors like you that we can continue to function and expand the scope of our projects.

All donations we receive are used exclusively for the maintenance of the Petition Online - Australia website across the world and for the promotion of individual petitions.

By following our code of ethics we have become an important partner to non-profit organizations, non-governmental organizations, and regular citizens in many countries.

We are the place where non-violent resistance begins.

Even a small donation helps. Please support our cause
