Australia - Police question abattoir saboteur Louis Toumbas for obtaining money by deception

20 Jul 2012

Police questioned abattoir saboteur Louis Toumbas for obtaining money by deception, it is reported after he set up an unlawful website demanding donations from the public.

Greek Cypriot "Fat" Louis Toumbas boasts of his close ties to the Queensland police and his questioning would have caused severe embarrassment to a few officers from ethnic backgrounds.

If Toumbas was genuine in his allegations over Q Fever he will have to shut down every cattle farm, abattoir, train, truck, circus, exhibition and show rid of all household pets then lock him self in a bubble!

Reality shows that this is all about land he purchased close to a large regional abattoir, which happens to be the largest employer in the district.

As well as setting up a web site to mislead the public about a local abattoir, he has also threatened our website with the most libellous allegations.

It's a FAKE!

We do not make the news we merely report the news, however "Fat" Louis does not let the truth spoil a good story.

We have been given a figure of how much Toumbas has allegedly received from his scam, however in fairness we will not comment on that until the police investigation is over.

There has been no Q Fever in the region for the last six years, a government spokesman confirmed to us that the allegations are quite preposterous.

Local farmers are outraged at the antics of the Greek Cypriot.
